Excitement High On Eve Of First Mock Parliament

First Session of Parliament in Union Ballroom Tonight — Prime Minister Kelloway Ready to Defend Policy of Reciprocity With United States — Open Discussion To Be Held

MINISTERS of both government and opposition parties of the legislature are prepared to justify their annual stipend of $4000 when the first session of Parliament gets under way this evening at 8.15 p.m. in the ballroom of the Union. The issue at stake will be, "Resolved that the salvation of Canada lies in close economic co-operation with the United States."

No Cabinet Chosen

No cabinet has been chosen this session in order to afford as many students as possible an opportunity to express their opinions. The Debating Union is especially anxious for newcomers who have any inclination for debating or public speaking to participate in the general discussion that follows the presentation of cases by the respective leaders.

The Rt. Honourable Eli C. Kelloway, Prime Minister, will encounter stern opposition from the Honourable Allan Anderson and his cohorts who have among their number such stalwart champions as Donald Black, John Kerr, Charles Wayland and Douglas MacIntyre.

Result of Interview

When interviewed, the leader of the opposition stated that a Hibernian like Eli C. Kelloway should be peeling potatoes or rioting in the streets of Dublin with General O'Duffy and his men. "Yes," quoth Anderson, "Kelloway's head shall topple."

Co-operation Advocated

"Bigger and better co-operation with the United States" is the government's belief. Such an attitude, it contends, is imperative not only from the Canadian point of view but also in that the salvation of our American cousins lies in co-operation with Canada.

A secret service agent informed the Prime Minister that the Opposition leader was seen wearing an American made tie. Accordingly he is at a loss to understand why the Honourable A. Anderson is intending to oppose a Government that wishes to strengthen the "ties that bind." At any cost the Right Honourable E. Kelloway will make it a point to tie the Opposition in knots.

Other Participants

Others who have signified their intention of participating in the debate are: Edmund Gordon, Sol Levites, Ted Piper, Syd Friedman, Henry Schafhausen and Charles Lapfky.

Kenneth C. Baker, President of the Debating Union will act as Speaker and Phil Vineberg will officiate as Clerk of the House.

St. Cyprian de Trois Spittoons

Passing through here yesterday on his way back to Montreal, the Right Honourable Eli C. Kelloway paused to say a few words to the populace. Unfortunately, the good people gathered with the impression that they were about to hear a spirited speech recalling the fame of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and when the Prime Minister spoke only of himself and his policy, the crowd dwindled. However, he left a good impression by kissing all the babies within reach.

Toronto, Ont.

The Honourable Allen Anderson spoke here last night. Unfortunately, he got his notes mixed and gave an address intended to be given later to a meeting of the Young People's Association of the Madison Baptist Church (Adults 15c, Children 10c—All Welcome) on the subject—"Resolved That

Figures Mount In First Report On Date Bureau

Yesterday was an epoch-making day in the history of McGill. The nether regions of the Union, usually so forlornly deserted save for the occasional freshman reporter, were turned into a beehive of activity. Flushed and flustered students, freshmen as well as upperclassmen, rushed in and out of that hallowed spot, the "Dally" office. Each newcomer arrived with his hands deep in his trousers pockets, and each one, in turn, left with a satisfied expression on his face.

Yes sir, the Date Bureau was doing a roaring business in the way of receiving applications. From early morning on they started to pile up, coming in thick and fast as the day progressed. The plain white envelopes, sealed to prevent their precious content of vital information from escaping, kept rolling in. Each one had a distinctive stamp upon it. The one coming from the freshman bore the mark of inexperience. The requirement was simply for a date to take to the Union House Informal, no other specifications were mentioned. Quite different was the senior's wish. The girl that he would have for his soul-mate must be one

Representatives For Medicine '36 Chosen

At the meeting of Medicine '36 held yesterday afternoon, William B. Hutchinson was elected President of Medicine '36. Hutchinson succeeds Louis Olter who is the retiring President.

Other officers elected at the meeting were: Michael Mastrianni as Vice President, William Mathers as Secretary-Treasurer, Kenneth S. Rychie will be the Medicine '36 representative to the Medical Banquet Committee, while Fred Grauer will be their officer on the Medical Ball Committee.

Plans Complete For Union House Social

To be Held in Ballroom Tomorrow Night

MANY TICKETS SOLD

Special Feature of Union Informal to be Iz Aspler's Jazz Band

An eventful and important week in the University will be culminated by Friday night, the date set for the first Union House Informal of the year. Intercollegiate track and tennis matches will bring three out-of-town teams to McGill, namely Queen's, Varsity, and R.M.C. The track meet will be by that time have been completed, and all but the final rounds of the tennis tournament played out.

This is also the night before the McGill-Western game at London, the time that spirits run high, not to mention hopes. To the aluring tunes of Iz Aspler's jazz band an opportunity presents itself for the Beau Brummels to trip the light fantastic toe.

Special Features

Among the special features planned by the committee will be a Paul Jones, and elimination dances. There will also be the Jarapo, and a bevy of chorus girls will give a few spectacular hula-hula's. It has also been suggested that there will be a barn dance.

The past popularity of these informal dances is again showing itself this year by the vast number of advanced reservations which have already been sold. Tickets are being sold at the Union Tuck Shop, and from Bill Gentlemen's Office in the Art's Building. They may also be obtained from Medical and Engineering Building, Toronto. Needless to say, his reception was not very cordial.

We Should Send Foreign Missions To Ottawa, Ont.

Last night the Honourable Kenneth G. Baker set aside the cares and worries of the preparation for tonight to have his permanent reset. He says that as far as he is concerned they can "wave" the issue.

who is quietly vivacious. She must be able to enjoy an evening with her escort without expecting him to get too "fresh!"

And whether the application came from a new student, strange to the ways of McGill, or whether it came from a seasoned veteran of many campaigns, whether the applicant was a man, a woman, or a child, the legend was the same: "I would be willing to share the expenses of the first 'date' with my partner."

The only marring feature of the whole day's activity was the fact that the co-eds at the University appeared more shy than the men. The applications from the latter have temporarily outnumbered those from the fair sex. However, the ice has been broken. One by one a few of the bolder spirits representing the R.V.C. slid into the precincts of the office, and looking shyly about them, as though afraid of being detected, they unburdened themselves of the precious information which will so soon be put to so much good use in the interests of both men and women at McGill. Come on co-eds, don't be shy, follow these leaders!

Spanish Club Plans To Invite Consuls Of Many Countries

Professor Sugars Outlines Aims of Club To Newcomers

DR. PEREZ SPOKE

Meeting Addressed by Doctors—Absence of Gen. Jaramillo Keenly Felt

An air of informality marked the first meeting of the Spanish Club held in the Union last night. The attendance was comparatively small in as much as first and second year students were not duly acquainted with the organization. The Executive believes that with the beginning of more varied and extensive programs a greater attendance will result. It is planned to invite consuls of various countries to future functions as a feature which will add much colour to the gatherings.

Professor Sugars was the speaker for the evening. He stated that the purpose of the Club is to afford students of Spanish an opportunity to meet each other and to exchange ideas. The Club, it was emphasized, is not intended expressly for students but is the centre for those who have a leaning towards and a love for Spanish.

Dr. Perez Spoke

Dr. Sanchez-Perez, a newcomer to the city, spoke briefly. Dr. Perez was accompanied by Dr. Black, with whom he is studying at the Neurological Institute under Dr. Penfield. The absence of General Jaramillo of Colombia was keenly missed by everyone. He was a distinguished scholar, poet, author and explorer. His services to the Club were of inestimable value.

The General was recalled to his native country to receive another appointment. The Club wishes him success and prosperity in his new position. It was hoped that the Club will have the opportunity of hearing Dr. Perez again during his stay in Montreal.

The meeting was presided over by Allison B. Luke. Refreshments were served, and the next meeting was called for October 21.

McGill Historical Club Holds First Meeting At Noon

A PRELIMINARY meeting of the Historical Club will be held at 12 o'clock in the History Conference Room (Room 45) in the Arts Building. At this meeting business with relation to this year's activities will be discussed, and registration of new members will take place.

The Historical Club is the oldest of the University Clubs, having been founded in 1897. As it is customary for meetings to be held in the homes of members and friends of the Club, it is necessary to restrict the membership to thirty. For this reason it will be impossible to admit first year students to the Club; but all other male students interested in any aspect of history or historical discussion are invited to join. The Executive is preparing what is hoped will prove a most interesting programme, including a dinner meeting and an historical debate.

Maccabeans Choose Executive Officers

P. Vineberg, New President, Presented Brief Report

PLANS DISCUSSED

Arrangements For An International Debate Concluded

The season's activities of the Maccabean Circle opened yesterday with a business meeting held in the Music Hall of the Union. The main business of the programme was the election of officers for the coming season. Phil Vineberg was elected president and the other posts on the executive were filled as follows: Vice President, Evelyn Elkin; Treasurer, Hyman Perelmutter; Secretary, Beatrice Kleinberg.

In addition to these major officers, an advisory committee consisting of Judy Ortenberg, Isadore Dubin and Rebecca Ein was appointed. The entire Executive will appoint three officers to fill the posts of Chairman of the Social Committee, Employment Committee and Educational Committee as well as two additional Committee members. Their names will be announced later.

A vote of thanks to Morton Bloomfield, past President of the Circle, and to the other members of the out-going Executive was moved and passed by the membership.

Report Presented

Phil Vineberg presented a brief report of the Committee appointed last spring to arrange a programme for the coming season. This Committee enjoyed the full cooperation of prominent graduates of McGill, and has worked out a programme embracing many activities. Among the highlights of this plan is an international debate with some American University which has an organization somewhat similar to the Maccabean Circle. The other oratorical feature will be a Freshman sophomore debate.

It has also been arranged for Dr. A. L. Sacher, Assistant professor of History at the University of Illinois, to address a Supper Meeting. Also of special interest will be the study groups meeting every week; they will afford to the students an opportunity to discuss in an informal manner Jewish problems of the day. The first of these groups scheduled to meet on November 8th the topic discussed being the Economic Status of World Jewry.

Not All-Inclusive

This programme does not include all the season's activities and any suggestions from the student body will be appreciated by the Executive. The Maccabean Circle extends a cordial invitation for all to attend.

Arts Football

It is imperative that all those who played against Engineers on Tuesday report for practice on the Campus in front of the Arts Building at four o'clock this afternoon. The next game for Arts is scheduled for Saturday when they meet Macdonald College.

Law Undergraduate Elections
The election for a Law representative to the Students' Council was held yesterday with Mr. John A. Hutchins being chosen to represent his Faculty.

The voting at the polls was fairly heavy with over 70 percent of the Law students exercising their franchise.

Admittance

Student coupons are valid for admittance to the Intercollegiate Track Meet tomorrow. The meet commences at 1.30 o'clock sharp.

Knowledge Cannot Lead To Increased Happiness In World

Morton Bloomfield Addressed Meeting of Philosophical Society

PRESIDENT RESIGNS

Members Take Active Part In Discussion After Address

"Happiness must be based on personal experience if it is to have any meaning for us." This was the stand taken by Morton Bloomfield in an address at the opening meeting of the Philosophical Society held last evening in Strathcona Hall. Happiness is a personal experience which cannot be induced artificially by knowledge.

Before presenting his paper, Morton Bloomfield announced his decision to resign from the presidency of the Society, owing to the pressure of other college activities. A committee, to consider the appointment of a new president, will be named by the executive of the Society.

Tribute Paid to Dean

Miss Aikman, Secretary, read a resolution expressing the grief of the society at the death of its Honorary President, Dean Ira Mackay. A short sketch of the late Dean's activities was given by Dr. C. Handel, his last publication—a paper on "Causation and Cognition,"—had appeared in the Philosophical Review, a journal he had aided in establishing.

In developing his theory, that happiness and knowledge were not related, Bloomfield drew a distinction between formal and other types of knowledge. Formal knowledge was the whole body of information dealing with the complete history of man, while informal knowledge merely comprised personal experience.

Knowledge and Happiness

"The acquisition of knowledge," he stated, "leads to a sense of inadequacy which makes a happy state of mind impossible." Hence it was not happiness but on the other hand, unhappiness, which contained a definite intellectual element. In illustrating this philosophic attitude, the speaker stated that the realization that Caesar had crossed the Rubicon did not produce any feeling of happiness within us.

A very animated discussion from the floor followed the conclusion of this address. Some of the speakers stressed the beliefs that true happiness must contain a definite intellectual element and that intellectual experience could lead to greater happiness. All who are interested in the discussion of philosophical problems are cordially invited to join the Society.

Newman Club Dance Takes Place Tonight

Large Turnout of Catholic Students Anticipated By Executive

The social activities of the Newman Club of McGill for this year get underway tonight with an informal dance to be held at Congress Hall, Dorchester and St. Alexander Street, at nine p.m. Dance Music for this occasion will be provided by Johnny Reilly's orchestra and in view of the fact that the evening's entertainment is absolutely free, a large turnout of the Catholic student body at McGill is anticipated.

Contrary to the precedent set up in past years, tonight's informal will be the means whereby new members will be enabled to meet the older students. The executive feel that if the affair tonight is a success others might undoubtedly be held in the future.

The regular Mass and breakfast of the Club will be continued next Sunday at 9.45 a.m. On this occasion Mr. A. Corrigan of Ottawa will be the guest speaker.

Arts '37 Election

A meeting of the Arts sophomores was held in room 44 of the Arts building at one o'clock yesterday for the purpose of electing their officers for the session.

The majority of the ballots cast were in favour respectively of the following men:

President, G. H. Wilson.
Vice-President, James Mills.
Secretary, John Perrie.
Treasurer, S. Parker Chesney.

Rhodes Scholarships

Rhodes Scholarship candidates are required to obtain "A" written statement from the President or Acting President of his College or University to the effect that his application as a suitable candidate is approved." For this formal approval candidates should apply to the Registrar.

Title Of First Production Made Public By Players

"The Devil's Disciple" to be Produced in December — Filmore Sadler to Direct While Heward Stikeman to Produce — Costumes and Five Scenes to be Features Of Production

"THE Devil's Disciple" by George Bernard Shaw has been chosen as the first major production of the McGill Players' Club. This was announced at the general meeting yesterday afternoon by President Heward Stikeman, who is certain that this play will enjoy an even greater success than "Hay Fever," which was produced last spring. This particular masterpiece by Shaw is a costume play set during the American Revolutionary War.

Five Scenes

There are five scenes, the sets for which, the President states, will be more pretentious than any previously constructed by the Players' Club, and, together with the brilliant costuming required, ought to add even more interest to the production. The cast is large, with important parts for seven men and for five women, in addition to which there are a number of mob scenes requiring several players.

Two prizes are offered in connection with the forthcoming production, one of five dollars for the person selling the greatest number of tickets, and another of four free tickets for the designer of the best poster submitted.

The President then brought forward a new piece of business, one which has never before been discussed by the club. It is the question of making outstanding Players' Club ex-workers honorary members. The persons proposed and seconded in this regard were: Professor T. W. MacDermot, who formerly did the Players' Club great services as Honorary President before being called to Ottawa; Lorne Gales, now President of the Students' Council; Ronald M. Leatham, who did splendid work for the Club for three years, and finished a highly successful term as President last spring; Katharine MacKenzie, an outstanding member of the executive of two years ago, and Margaret Miller, who is well known for her performances in many productions, notably last year's "Hay Fever," and her handling of her position as Vice-President.

These names will be voted on at the next general meeting, the date of which has not yet been decided on. However, a large turnout is expected to decide this matter, which has never before been considered by the Club.

Progress has already been made towards the preparations for the publication of the Old McGill. The portrait contract has been granted to Rice Studio. It is expected that the individual pictures will be taken in the beginning of December and that they will be finished by the 15th of that month.

The Annual Board is still making its appeal to students for their full co-operation and will be open to their suggestions. The year-book will be out some two months earlier than usual this year. Class presidents should be reminded to communicate with the Photographic Editor, Herman Cole, for appointments. The "Campus Life" feature will again be given ample space. Short write-ups by well-known students will be in evidence. There is no Woman's Editors but one will be expected shortly. The book, it is expected will be bigger than ever, especially if Macdonald College incorporates her yearly publication with Old McGill.

Vol. XXIV—Thurs., Oct. 18, 1934—No. 13

Fraternities

ONCE again the perennial question of fraternities and their place in college life has entered the limelight, this time at Queen's University Kingston. A heated struggle is going on there, the main point of contention apparently not being whether fraternities should or should not be allowed, but whether they should be allowed to be affiliated with international bodies. The point at question would seem to be rather small to an outsider, but it must be of considerable importance when the ruling body of Queen's students is willing to go to the extent of almost wrecking their senior football team by suspending several of the leading players for the remainder of the year.

Many years ago the question of fraternities and everything pertaining to them was threshed out in a thorough and satisfactory manner, at McGill. Here, fraternities are not by any means regarded as sacrosanct—witness the flippant attitude of the Daily on several occasions in the past—they undoubtedly do much good and some evil. A fraternity is often a godsend to the student who comes from out of town. He is provided with a fair substitute for the family roof-tree, congenial company, and meals, which if not so hot, are usually plentiful. On the other hand a fraternity is sometimes the undoing of a student who if he had not belonged would have made good. There are too many counter attractions, too many temptations continually assailing the student who has not sufficient will-power to say, "No; I have work to do."

It has often been claimed by the opponents of fraternities that they tend to break down college spirit—to introduce sectionalism. This is true of many colleges in the States, where fraternities play such an important part, that not to belong to one is equivalent to social ostracism; but at McGill where there are so many fraternity members, also residents in Montreal, and who have known, met and played with one another since they were children, and where there are all the diverse attractions offered by a city of any size, this strong element of feeling is lacking. There is a spirit of tolerance exhibited on all sides. Fraternity members do not look down on a student merely because he fails to belong to a fraternity, neither does the non-fraternity man criticize the other because he is. It is a matter of purely personal volition.

At Queen's there is an example of this spirit of sectionalism so absent and foreign to McGill. Kingston is a small town—by far the greater portion of the students are not residents there—the body of students being not so large as at McGill, acquaintances are closer; cliques are numerous. All these facts tend to give play to sectionalism. College spirit has always been very strong at Queen's and doubtless the Alma Mater Society there fears that fraternities will grievously weaken it, if they are allowed to follow the trend of feeling so prevalent in the United States.

Theory And Practice

A MID all current controversial discussions concerning the NRA, its efficacy, or its advisability, or its tendencies towards socialism or dictatorship or some such thing, there is one aspect of its mechanism which cannot be ignored by the colleges as a whole. Reference is made to the fact that numerous academic experts have been called upon by the administration to occupy important governmental positions and to lend their support, based not upon actual political or administrative experience but rather on theoretical and statistical knowledge, towards the solution of the nation's economic problems.

It is quite true that there may be found examples of men who, in previous years, abandoned their posts at universities in order to assume executive ones in the service of their country. A classic instance of this type is to be found in the person of the Americans' chief war-time executive, President Wilson, who was a professor of Political Science and the author of an important volume on the theories of the state before he entered the field of politics. Nevertheless, it is only in the last two years that a chief executive of a country has officially beckoned to his aid several of the master-minds of the academic world.

This phenomenon is all the more pronounced to us today because of the obvious absence for the most part, of gowmsmen and men of profound learning in high state offices. We have come to believe that such men are wholly unfit for public office, that they do not possess the "necessary facilities" for the discharge of such practical matters. That, however, need not be, any more than the belief that it is impossible for the man of executive and practical ability to grasp the rudiments of theory. If corroboration of such a view is necessary, it is sufficient to refer to such historical figures as Confucius, Pythagoras, Goethe, More, Hobbes and Leibnitz, all of whom were geniuses in their respective fields of learning, who lived in their own world of ideas, yet who were alive to the practical affairs of their times and participated actively in the political and financial problems which confronted their states.

Whether or not a reversion to this type of personality, the man who combines sound and authoritative theory with sane and practical wisdom, as an official of the state is forthcoming, is a matter of conjecture. At present it is difficult to establish definitely the permanent effects of the NRA and of its various phases. Certainly indisputable, however, is the fact that public opinion is altering its views of the relative capabilities of the ordinary business man and industrial leader and those of the academic expert. Perhaps, it may be suggested, the tendencies of the times point to an improved state of affairs in which the leaders of corporations and the heads of governments will unite with men of learning and knowledge, and the two together will unfold many of the intricate puzzles which continue to baffle governments and peoples.

THE ORIGIN OF WITCH FIRE

By RHEA

The legends and mythology of the Greece that was, comprise a wondrous realm of romance and beauty where wander even the supersophisticates of our generation of realists. Of these legends, none is more appealing than the story of Rhodanthe, a tale of love and of hate, and of a dreadful vengeance, which still causes witch fires to burn on wild waste lands—a grim warning to despoilers of true love.

RHODANTHE

MOIST fragrant breezes playfully chased the white vaporous clouds in waves across a bright blue sky. Faint tendrils of green trailed from the trees. Upon this spring morn, Rhodanthe a radiant bride rose from the blue-bell bower to watch the glory of the golden sunshine on the dark grey waters which flowed swiftly by. In sheer delight, she laughed and danced to the joyous peals of a lark's song. What chill cry breaks the rhapsody with the cruel tidings, "To-day is Yesterday! The Groom shall not come!" Lol the merry melodies of the marriage lutes cease. Dreary terrors drenched the cheeks and bleak sorrow rent the heart of Rhodanthe. In deepest grief, lovelorn she lay; in untimely desolation, she drooped and pined. And anon faded as the sea foam.

At midnight, a wailing wind moaned through the reeds of the funeral pyre. In despair, Fair Cynthia wept and mourned as the lofty flames reached towards the sky. A sudden flare revealed the Malicious Groom near by. O Horror! he slyly grips at the grim thing—such is his cruel humour. Agast at his perverted pleasure Fair Cynthia vehemently vowed vengeance to her dear dead Rhodanthe. Forthwith Fair Cynthia, veiled in a black mantle, set out through an unfrequented forest on a strange mission. Grotesque shadows haunted her in the pathless woods, but undaunted, she journeyed on until she reached the silver gates of the silver palace of Melissa, a far-famed sorceress. Hereat, she knocked thrice murmuring at each knock the malign pretext, "To-day is Yesterday! The Groom shall not come!"

Serenely Melissa welcomed the guest who told her tales of grief and pleaded aid. This granted, Fair Cynthia followed her hostess into a secret mirrored chamber filled with sacred images. In this shrine the sorceress conjured up the spirit of the dead maiden and breathed it into a graven image of Aphrodite who straightaway came to life. Forthwith Melissa acquainted Aphrodite of her mission.

In deep night when the moon waned low, the Malicious Groom awoke to find Aphrodite beckoning. Avidly he reached to embrace her, but she, being sprite eluded him. With a mocking laugh, she lured him forth into the starry darkness. With unabating ardour and with unrelenting defeat, he pursued her over rocks and sand, over mountains and vales throughout the night.

Weary and worn, the wretched man at last succeeded in grasping Aphrodite's golden veil. For one brief moment, he held her in his arms. Then from the tranquil dawn came weird noises carrying with them a faint suggestion of the malign pretext, "To-day is Yesterday!" and telling Aphrodite that now was the time to teach a sadist the sacredness of love. With sweet beguiling grace, Aphrodite smiled and kissed the Malicious Groom. A bolt of crimson fire leaped from her lips to his and consumed him in an instant. Green, blue and white glows his unearthly pyre on the forlorn marshes for evermore.

LISTENIN'-IN BY ELENPY

French-Canada To The Fore

THE accusation is sometimes flung out unthinkingly that French-Canadians are very ignorant of music except in the realm of folk songs. A very notable exception to that apparent rule, and a worthy advocate of the contrary opinion, is Wilfrid Pelletier, conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra.

Born in Montreal, in 1896, of French-Canadian parents the young Pelletier showed signs of musical ability at a very early age. His parents, realizing that he was destined for a musical career, started him off on a course of harmony and composition. He did so well in his studies of these subjects, that while still in his teens he was made assistant conductor of the Montreal Opera Company. From this point on he rose rapidly. In 1914 he won the Province of Quebec prize for European study, and went to Paris.

Returning to this continent after an absence of three years, Pelletier was engaged as assistant conductor for French and Italian repertoire at the Metropolitan Opera in New York. Later on he also toured the country, conducting various opera companies from coast to coast. Finally, five years ago he was made conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Besides his work, which is his chief occupation and hobby, Wilfrid Pelletier has one more hobby—the collecting of Penguins. A few years ago his interest in these curious birds was aroused to such an extent that he determined to make a collection of them. Now he has a large number of them. Two tiny specimens are especially valuable to him, so that he wears them on his watch-chain. One is a gift from Lily Pons, and the other from Rosa Brampton.

Because of his intense interest in the theatre and music, the famous conductor has little time for any other outside activity. Most of his time is spent at home in preparation for future concerts.

In recent years Pelletier has seen a gradual confluence of the theatre and the opera, and a merging of the two arts into a richer and fuller realization of his ideal. He still lives in the hope of seeing the day when drama and music will go hand in hand, and histrionic skill, as well as vocal ability shall be a prime requisite of an operatic star.

D'Ye Ken John Peel?

ON OCTOBER twentieth John Peel, that patriarch of all English huntsmen will be one hundred years old. In the little village of Calbeck, Cumberland, England, this occasion will be observed in a fitting manner. An annual hunt is organized by the natives of this village in October, to commemorate the birthday of their renowned townsman. This year the colourful ceremonies attendant upon the celebration will be broadcast to this continent by short-wave. The program will start at noon on Saturday. The strains of the familiar folk song will be heard, after which the baying of the hounds and the "view halloo" will be picked up by the microphone of CBS.

You're Some Dunc!

WHEN Eddie Cantor took Eve Sully under his wing he found that her colossal stupidity was far beyond his powers of handling. He could cope with Jimmy Wallington, with Rubinoff, yes, even with Take-A-Chair-And-Park-Your-Carcase, but when it came to Eve Sully he was rendered absolutely powerless. In consequence of that fact, her partner, Block, and the managers of the "Big Show" decided to try their hands at it, and they succeeded. Now Eve Sully is dumber and more exasperating than ever, but she has so far been completely off the Chase and Sanborn program. Instead, you can hear her making everybody's life miserable on Monday night at 9:30 P.M., and "believe me, I'll say" she makes it miserable!

Cobb Is Back

ON SUNDAY, Oct. 21, listeners of the Hoover Sentinels' Serenade, broadcast on an NBC network, will receive a rare treat. Irvin S. Cobb, story teller, newspaperman, and raconteur par excellence will again tread the air lanes. Mr. Cobb, whose homely wit and sugar-coated pills of wisdom have reached the American public before, will be the guest performer on this program. Many of us who have seen "Judge Priest" will appreciate what is meant by being able to strike the right chord as does Irvin S. Cobb.

THE CANADIAN STUDENT, Student Christian Movement of Canada, 1164 Bay St., Toronto.

AMONG the varied types of magazines and newspapers published by students in the different universities, only one may claim to represent the whole student body of Canada and to be national in character. The "Canadian Student", published monthly by the Student Christian Movement of Canada ranks alone among Canadian student publications in this respect. In its own words: "The Canadian Student exists to give utterance to the thought of students on vital matters." Its 24 pages of reading matter contain articles and items on a variety of subjects, which serve to make it a medium of communication between university students in the principal centres of higher education in Canada. An analysis of the 1933-34 volume reveals that during the year 10 percent of its reading space was devoted to editorials, 47 percent to articles, 10 percent to book reviews, and fully 27 percent to inter-university news items.

Each issue contains three or four well-written articles, of which at least one deals with some pertinent religious problem and another with a vital social or political problem of the day. The Freshman and His Religion, The Relevance of Christianity to the Life of Today, Have We a Challenge are articles belonging to the first-mentioned category. Can We Have Peace, Danger Spots in the Present World Today, Unemployment and Personality to the latter. Short notes on contributors are helpful to the discriminating student who desires to know the pedigree of an unfamiliar author. Three to five book reviews in each issue, concise and readable, provide students with a critical appraisal of selected recent publications. In its "With the Movement" section and by means of its reports on conferences, camps and similar events the "Canadian Student" keeps its readers in touch with happenings on other campuses.

All in all, the magazine is well written and neatly made up. It compares more than favorably with other student publications. One gathers the impression from the articles and book reviews that it is committed to a social gospel. While the emphasis on the social aspects of religion, economics and politics is quite evident, the philosophy expressed is not of a brand which provokes violent revolutions. Nevertheless it is stimulating and thought-provoking. Undoubtedly "The Canadian Student" has a place in Canadian University life in that it contacts at least one of the important college groups. Further efforts along the direction of developing an inter-university spirit are to be encouraged. A. M. (Albert Moellmann).

Omnibus by STRAPHANGER

THE DATE BUREAU that has just been opened in McGill University, which enables a man to be supplied with a suitable party for an outing, and assists shy girls in "clicking" for the evening, is an excellent idea, despite all its disadvantages. There is a great number of people in the world so lonely that they have actually become lonesome; people on whom isolation has had such an effect that they have begun to pity themselves.

THE DISADVANTAGES of loneliness at a university are many, and not the least of them is that the lonely person is almost driven to study, which is the last thing for which one goes to a university. One goes to a university for culture, not for learning, which is a dull thing. And culture is not to be had singly.

THE SCHEME whereby a student can find a partner for an evening, which may eventually mean a tyrant for life, is very simple. You fill in a form, send it to the proper quarter, and await results. The form you fill up asks what kind of a partner you would like, laying great emphasis on the personal appearance. You have to state whether you like your partner fat or thin, tall or short, blonde or brunette.

WE ARE NOT told what is going to happen if the bureau is "out" of blondes at the time an application is made for one. If a man sends in a request something like this: "Please for the evening of October 22 supply me with a blonde; young, lively, with blue eyes, weight about 112 pounds and height about 5 feet 6 inches."

The bureau replies something after this manner:

"Sir:—We regret to state that at the moment we happen to be out of the kind of co-ed you desire; but we have several on our lists that might be equally suitable. One conforms to all requirements apart from weight."

"Miss Smithers, whom we suggest, is young, extraordinarily lively, with blue eyes; but although she is only 5 feet 5½ in height, she weighs 200 pounds. Unless you require her for dancing, we can heartily recommend her. She is very good at looking at the pictures and is exceptionally good at taking a supper."

"If Miss Smithers does not answer your requirements, please ask for other selections. We are here to serve you."

IN CASE it should be thought that I labour under the old delusion that the man chooses the woman and not the woman the man, let us now see the kind of letter that the bureau (which, by the way, the unimaginative authorities of the university will never allow to be established) will receive from the woman student.

She fills in the form stating the physical characteristics of the man she would like to take her for a soda. Then she adds the other characteristics she considers essential in males. "Clever, without having eternally to try and impress it on the company; witty, without being a cheap punster; silent, unless he has something to say; and interested in other people more than he is in himself." This is impossible of achievement, of course.

She will add a footnote to the effect that she would much prefer a partner who has never taken the logic class; failing whom, one who has forgotten all he ever knew about syllogisms. For, if she is a wise girl, as girls ought to be and sometimes are, she will know that there is no person in the world more irritating than a student in the logic class. He is always trying to engage in syllogistic conversation, and insists on arguing according to Hoyle. He cannot discuss; he must argue.

I SUPPOSE that the fellow who intends to run this bureau thinks that he will be in a position to have the first choice. "Thousands at his bidding" meet; so why should not he have the time of his life?

He will then be able to tell his clients, like the real estate dealers, that he has "personally inspected the property and highly recommends it."

But, if ever he is allowed to establish his bureau, he may now be assured that he will lose all interest in the subject immediately after he has chosen a lady for himself.

B. Of M. And Red Team Play 3-3 Tie

THOUGH the McGill English Rugby Team missed many a fine chance to score against the Bank of Montreal, they managed to break even, the final score being 3-3. The Redmen more than held their own, the greater part of the play being confined to the Bankers' territory.

Romons of McGill scored a try in the early moments of play. Later the Bankers evened the score making it 3-3, neither team being able to convert. Rabbett of the McGill three-quarter line just missed a dropkick.

near the end of the game which would have turned the tide for the McGillians. The Redmen outshone their rivals in every department of the game.

The Collegians showed a great improvement over last year's aggregation. Judging from today's play, they loom as favourites to regain the title which they dropped to Varsity last year for the first time in seven years.

The line-up for the Red team was: Wakefield, Romons, Coleman, Angel, Horwood, Rabbitt, Smith, Gildea, Williams, Munroe, Scott, Duffus, Savage, Hamilton, Stapleton.

Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament Commences This Morning

Tennis Draw Is Made; Seeded Men Get Bye

Slight Changes in Play Made — Preliminary Round Scheduled For Ten O'Clock — Best Draw in Many Years — Rainville to Preside as Referee — Queen's, Varsity, R.M.C. and U. of M. Players Ready to Challenge McGill's Title

At a meeting of the Intercollegiate Tennis Committee held last night in the Union, the draw for the tournament which commences tomorrow was drawn up. After a prolonged discussion it was decided that the form of play used in past years would be followed this time only with slight alterations. The committee consisted of representatives from each of the competing universities, Queen's, University of Toronto, R.M.C., University of Montreal and McGill. Bill Pigot of Varsity presided.

The change effected in the tournament is that the first seeded players of four of the five teams would be placed one in each of the four brackets. This means that, unless there are upsets, they will meet only in the semi-final round.

Red Intermediates In 23-2 Defeat At Hands Of Eastward

Forward Passing Attack Of Visitors Provided Victory Margin

McARTHUR STARS
WHAT was undoubtedly the finest exhibition of high pressure forward passing seen at the Molson Stadium this year was played last night during the final quarter of the game between the Red Intermediates and the Eastward Team. The Eastenders won by a score of 23-2, 18 of which points were made in the last quarter. They were the direct result of an amazing forward passing attack in which eight forwards were completed in succession. Coupled with this brilliant exhibition the Eastward team added insult to injury by intercepting three McGill forwards.

The star of this attack was Atchinson who always seemed to throw the ball right into his team-mates arms. This fine half also kicked well earning two points that way. Altogether he aided his team to the extent of 13 points. Shields was another star for the winners. He ran 35 yards for the first touch of the game and his kicking was very consistent throughout. Ash shared the limelight with Atchinson in the forward passing field.

McArthur Outstanding
McGill showed their best form to date and except for the passing department were the better team. Until the last quarter they were only trailing by the narrow margin of 5-3. A newcomer to the team was the sensation for the Redmen. He answers to the name of McArthur, plays at half, and is the best running and plunging half that the second squad has had for a long time. His kicking along with that of Matheson's outdistanced that of the winners. Matheson was another star for the losers; he played a stirring all-round game until he was hurt just after the start of the second half.

The game was wide open throughout; both teams making several long runs for large gains. Both squads kicked continually and the distance obtained averaged about forty to forty-five yards. The teams attempted 22 forwards, McGill 10, and Eastward 12. The former completed 2 and the latter 8. The Redboys dominated the first quarter and due to fine running by McArthur and Matheson they moved down the field and culminated this effort with a rouge kicked by Matheson.

Eastward Scores Major
At the start of the second quarter right after Matheson went off hurt, the visitors chalked up their first major tally when Shields ran about 35 yards for a touch, which was not converted. McGill replied a few minutes later with another single this time off the boot of McArthur. This period contained many fumbles and play went from end to end with first one team and then the other having excellent scoring chances which they failed to utilize. The first half ended with the score: Eastward 5, McGill 2.

The third frame was similar to the second and the only score was a single booted by McArthur to Shields who fumbled but recovered. During this period McArthur made a fine run for yards on a fake-kick. The fourth quarter provided most of the excitement of the night. It started when Atchinson intercepted a Red forward thrown by McArthur. He followed this up with a forty yard pass which was completed. On the Red 25 yard line he threw another 20 yards and a moment later on the third down Ash threw one across the line to Flanagan. This was converted by a forward from Atchinson to Osborne. Score Eastward 11, McGill 3.

Right from the start Brocklehurst intercepted another McGill forward at the 55 yard line and ran to the 40. Then Atchinson threw his best forward of the night to McNab who ran across for five more counters. Eastward 16,

Bishops Gridmen Blank Freshmen; Glass Outstanding

Brilliant Backfielder Scores All Bishop's Points In 9-0 Victory

THE jinx that hangs over McGill football squads prevailed again yesterday as the highly-touted Frosh gridgers went down to defeat at the hands of a superior and more experienced Bishops team. The Bishops twelve took the lead in the eastern section of the Canadian Intercollegiate Football Union by blanking the Frosh 9-0.

Ogie Glass, star backfielder of the Bishops squad, played a lone hand in the victory, scoring all of his team's points, Glass accounted for the major score of the game when he went around the end in the first quarter. The touch was not converted. The remaining points were scored from the toe of the talented halfback, when he added single points in the second and third quarter, and two more rouges in the final stanza.

Fumbles Costly
McGill's defeat was due again to costly fumbles for the Bishops squad was quick to take advantage of them. Though the Frosh held the advantage on the line, they failed to capitalize on this margin, for long gains on plunges went for nil, as the Bishops team launched a brilliant aerial attack which materialized from the hands and toes of the versatile Glass.

The plunging of the Freshmen footballers was their only successful weapon of attack, for though the Bishops line was weak, the secondary line presented a formidable defence against end runs and also nullified the Redmen's forward-passing offense.

McGill had an opportunity for a major score in the third quarter when it recovered a blocked kick, but they failed to capitalize on their break when MacQuarrie fumbled on a plunge after going eight yards through the Bishops line.

Red Team Has Strong Representation For Tomorrow's Meet

MCGILL HOPES TO REPEAT 1933 WIN

Close Tussle Expected Between Local Squad And Varsity

MCGILL'S representatives in the Intercollegiate Track Meet, which takes place tomorrow at 1:30 o'clock sharp at the Stadium, wound up their workouts yesterday with a training session at which Coach Van Wagner gave his final talk for the meet. Every man on the team is in the peak of condition, thanks in large measure to Ernie Cook, veteran trainer of the squad. Ernie has helped the Red track teams to gain the Intercollegiate crown eleven times since 1919. The other four times it has gone to Varsity. Though Queen's have never succeeded in winning, they have always figured strongly in the meet, and this year's Tricolour squad, small though it is, is expected to give the other two teams a closer fight than ever.

The entry lists for the meet have been announced, also the list of officials. Incidentally, an official's job at a track meet is not so easy and

Red Soccer Team Play Practice Tilt

THE McGill soccer team will meet its last practice opposition of the season prior to Saturday's game against Varsity when it takes on a strong Workers-Sport eleven this evening at 8:30 p.m. at the Stadium. The latter team has made a name for itself in local soccer circles this season, having finished in second place in the standing, behind Royal Victoria Hospital. Besides this the Workers-Sport team was one of the four chosen in the annual Charity Cup Series and succeeded in winning its way into the final round. It also has a victory over Verdun Park to its credit in spite of the fact that the latter are Dominion Senior Champions.

Soccer Passes
All Soccer Members will obtain passes for admittance to the Stadium for tonight's game against Workers-Sport Soccer Team at the Pass Gate of the Stadium.

The personnel of this year's Red team include several new faces while several of last year's reliables are lost through graduation, included among whom are Carter, Reece and O. K. Ross. To lessen further the chances of a Red win tonight against such recognized strong opposition is the fact that Harkness, Captain elect, will be lost to the team for the remainder of the season through illness. Apart from this there will be four new faces on the McGill line-up, including Evelyn, Cussack, Rivett and Angel, which should enhance McGill's chances tonight.
